10 Tips For Safer Winter Generator Use

(NAPS)—If your electricity goes out due to snow and ice, a generator can keep power flowing to your home or business.

Just keep safety in mind when using generators, advises the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute (OPEI), an international trade association representing small engine, utility vehicle and outdoor power equipment manufacturers and suppliers.

"Not having power when you need it is frustrating, so a generator can provide emergency backup power at a reasonable cost," says Kris Kiser, President and CEO of OPEI. "It's important to follow all manufacturer's instructions, and never place a generator in your garage or inside your home or building. It should be a safe distance from the structure and not near an air intake."

More tips include:

#1. Take stock of your generator. Make sure equipment is in good working order before starting and using it. Do this before a storm hits.

#2. Review the directions. Follow all manufacturer's instructions. Review the owner's manuals (look manuals up online if you cannot find them) so equipment is operated safely.

#3. Install a battery-operated carbon monoxide detector in your home. This alarm will sound if dangerous levels of carbon monoxide enter the building.

#4. Have the right fuel on hand. Use the type of fuel recommended by the generator manufacturer to protect this important investment. It is illegal to use any fuel with more than 10% ethanol in outdoor power equipment. (For more information on proper fueling for outdoor power equipment visit www.Look-BeforeYouPump.com.) It's best to use fresh fuel, but if you are using fuel that has been sitting in a gas can for more than 30 days, add fuel stabilizer to it. Store gas only in an approved container and away from heat sources.

#5. Ensure portable generators have plenty of ventilation. Generators should NEVER be used in an enclosed area or placed inside a home, a building or a garage, even if the windows or doors are open. Place the generator outside and away from windows, doors and vents that could allow carbon monoxide to drift indoors.

A generator can make a big difference for your home or business when a storm strikes and the electricity goes out, but you have to use it safely.

#6. Keep the generator dry. Do not use a generator in wet conditions. Cover and vent a generator. Model-specific tents or generator covers can be found online for purchase and at home centers and hardware stores.

#7. Add fuel to the generator only when it's cool. Before refueling, turn the generator off and let it cool down.

#8. Plug in safely. If you don't yet have a transfer switch, you can use the outlets on the generator. It's best to plug in appliances directly to the generator. If you must use an extension cord, it should be heavy-duty and designed for outdoor use. It should be rated (in watts or amps) at least equal to the sum of the connected appliance loads. Make sure the cord is free of cuts and the plug has all three prongs.

#9. Install a transfer switch. A transfer switch connects the generator to the circuit panel and lets you power hardwired appliances. Most transfer switches also help avoid overload by displaying wattage usage levels.

#10. Do not use the generator to "backfeed" power into your home electrical system. Trying to power your home's electrical wiring by "backfeeding"—where you plug the generator into a wall outlet—is dangerous. You could hurt utility workers and neighbors served by the same transformer. Backfeeding bypasses built-in circuit protection devices, so you could damage your electronics or start an electrical fire.

Health And Well-BeingHow To Achieve A Healthy Mind And Body In The New Normal

(NAPS)—The way people live—from how they eat, sleep, work and move their bodies—has been disrupted in the last year-and-a-half, and adapting to and achieving mind-body balance amid these changes is no easy task. As the COVID-19 pandemic continues to alter routines and take a toll on physical and mental health, it's important to focus on overall well-being to achieve balance and overcome obstacles. To help, exercise physiologist, certified sports nutritionist and Bowflex fitness advisor Tom Holland has expert advice for reconnecting with yourself and creating the right routine to support your new normal.

Adjust to a New Way of Fitness

As many people were forced to adjust their fitness routines, they also discovered there isn't a one-size-fits-all approach to exercise. The new fitness normal is a hybrid approach of working out at home, at the gym or even on the road. Holland points out that as many people have shifted to a new work model that could include working from home, the office or while traveling, they also want solutions that allow them to work out whenever and wherever.

From livestream and on-demand classes to more in-person offerings, there's more flexibility than ever before to fit exercise into your schedule. With tools such as the JRNY digital fitness platform (<https://www.bowflex.com/jrny.html>), you can have 24/7 access to coaching and curated workout options.

Find Your Inner Greatness with a New Routine

In this new era of fitness, variety is key, so Holland recommends trading off between strength and high-intensity cardio workouts to keep your routine fresh, challenging and effective.

To stay engaged while exercising, try catching up on your favorite TV shows during your cardio workout. The new connected Bowflex Max Total 16 (<https://www.bowflex.com/max-trainer/mt16/100915.html>) lets you stream your HBO Max, Netflix, Hulu or Disney+ subscriptions on the built-in 16" HD touchscreen. For strength workouts, squeeze in a quick set of squats, crunches or push-ups in between your daily tasks. You'll get your body moving, increase your heart rate and build muscle—all while saving time.

Holland adds that finding a routine that works for you and that you look forward to, even if it's just five minutes a day, helps improve mental health, enhance mood, boost energy and combats health conditions and diseases.

The new connected Bowflex Max Total 16 offers a 16" HD touchscreen and integration with the immersive JRNY digital fitness platform, helping you stay engaged and motivated during challenging, high calorie burn interval workouts.

Stay Motivated Anywhere

It can be easy to stray from your exercise routine while away on vacation, during periods of adjustment such as a return to the office or when daily life is pulling you in many different directions. Holland emphasizes that staying motivated to stay active, wherever you are, comes with a variety of rewards.

Thanks to connected fitness solutions, you can take your personal trainer with you—virtually—to help you stay on track and maintain those new healthy habits. For instance, you can enjoy on-demand workouts such as yoga, Pilates and strength, wherever you are, by simply downloading the JRNY (<https://www.bowflex.com/jrny.html>) app on your Android or iOS device. To kick your workout up a notch, add the Bowflex SelectTech 840 kettlebell (<https://www.bowflex.com/selecttech/840-kettlebell/100790.html>), a compact solution that can travel with you.

Prioritizing your Well-Being

Research shows that moving your body stimulates different parts of your brain to release feel-good chemicals including serotonin, endorphins and dopamine. This leads to a cascade effect of better sleep, reduced stress and enhanced mood.

Holland notes that prioritizing your health and fitness will also help you be better equipped to manage the stresses of daily life and achieve a balanced mind and body—no matter what this new normal may bring.

Keeping It Great To Be A Kid

(NAPS)—In these uncertain times, kids need music more than ever. Anyone who has ever seen toddlers naturally sway and bob to music, knows that children feel music—and that music and kids go together like macaroni and cheese. Studies also show that music can help the very young deal with stress and turn around their emotions like nothing else.

Tunes For Toddlers

To that end, Walt Disney Records' most successful lullaby album artist and producer, Grammy nominee Fred Mollin,

Fun Songs About Life and Living

FRED MOLLIN (with his Friends)

Composer Fred Mollin and a young friend celebrate in song why it's great to be a kid—and a new album means your children can too.

lin, created "It's Great To Be a Kid," a new album of heartwarming, fun original songs for kids ages 1 through 6. These songs take children on a musical expedition highlighting the beautiful things in life, reminding them how much joy there is to look forward to in their young lives at a time when they need it most.

The songs evoke the simple pleasures of being young, driving in a car, walking and seeing the beauty of nature, playing with friends, dancing to an upbeat song, the joy of food and even the fun of helping tidy up the house. Three interactive Bonus Tracks are versions that leave key moments blank during the songs, for children to join in.
